

Hints and Tips

Having trouble finding a particular project in your Cordell® Report?

Ever had trouble finding a certain project that you know exists in your Cordell Report? We know this can happen, for any number of reasons, so we've listed a few tips below because we want to make sure you have access to and can find all the project information you need.

Reason # 1: The project name is different.

It's possible that the name of the project as you know it is different to the name that Reed Construction Data has given it. If this is the case, it's going to be difficult for you to find the project in your report, because you will need to look through every project listed.

Solution: If you're sure of the address and/or council for the project, check other projects listed under the relevant council. Most Cordell Reports sort the projects by Council so even if the project name is different, you should be able to find it by its location.

Reason # 2: The project category or location is not included in your Cordell Report.

Cordell Reports come in many variations, based on factors such as the location of projects, and the categories they fall under. It's possible, for example, that the project you're looking for is classified as 'Industrial', whereas your report might only cover Commercial projects. Similarly, your report might cover the metropolitan area, but the project you're looking for is outside the metro area.

Solution: If you are interested in having access to projects outside your current report parameters, it's best to speak to our Customer Support Team to organise getting a report that better matches your requirements. Call them on 1800 80 60 60.

Reason # 3: The project is not in the current issue of your Cordell Report.

The project may have been reported by Reed Construction Data in a previous issue that you may not have seen or noticed. We only re-report projects when there is an update to the project information.

Solution: Check the previous issues of your Cordell Report, and if you still can't find the project you're looking for, call our Research Hotline on 1800 011 846.

Don't forget, as a Reed Construction Data subscriber, you have free access to our Research Hotline which means you can call 1800 011 846 to speak to a researcher in your state. We'll do our best to give you the information you need, and if it turns out we don't already have details of the project you're looking for, we can investigate it further for you!
